

Die Hunns

You Rot Me

Volcom Entertainment

I pretty much back every band that Duane Peters is in, the new Die Hunns included. This shit is a little slower than some of his earlier projects but Duane is as much, or more of a force in music than he is in skateboarding these days, and that's ok. Sort of weird to see them on a Volcom label but whatever, hopefully they're getting paid these days. Slower and more plodding, Duane's bands always sort of sound like other 70's or early 80's punk bands, this album reminds me a bit of the Clash and their ilk, and since Joe Strummer is dead that will be just fine, thank you, although they could speed it up a bit, ya know? -MH
