

GUTTERMOUTH
SHAVE THE PLANET
VOLCOM

California punk-rock veterans Guttermouth return with their usual smarmy shtick intact on SHAVE THE PLANET, the band's 10th album, which clocks in at a trim 22 minutes. Still snotty after all these years, Guttermouth embodies the way punk rock used to be before everything became marketable and politically correct. Sarcastic and crass, tracks like "My Chemical Imbalance" and "Flacidism" display that, even after all the tours and albums under their belts, these guys are still in the perpetual state of arrested development—and thank God for that. Nonsensical and aiming to offend, Guttermouth's new album placates no one while paying homage to the true spirit of punk. www.volcoment.com -Mike SOS
